Guidance concerning revocation of consent

Text to be inserted in contexts where we request/have received consent to the processing of personal data:

“The consent which you have given may be revoked. Any revocation will have no consequences for your employment. You may revoke consent by contacting your immediate supervisor or your HR department. As a consequence of your revocation of consent, the university must as soon as possible cease processing of the data covered by your consent, unless the university has another legal basis for continued processing. If the processing continues on another legal basis than consent, you will be notified of this, with specification of the purpose of the continued processing.”