INTERNATIONAL CONSTRUCTION LAW

International construction law is an area of law that is gaining increasing popularity. Knowledge in this subject is highly valued in today's globalized world and creates excellent career opportunities in the field of both construction law and dispute resolution.

Participants in large construction projects frequently come from different jurisdictions. In such cases the use of domestic construction agreements is often inappropriate, and parties often resort to the use of international standard form construction agreements, such as the FIDIC Conditions of Contract.

This course deals with the legal aspects arising under international construction projects. The main focus of the course will be on the FIDIC Conditions of Contract, which are widely used throughout the world. The application of the FIDIC contracts will be examined from both a civil law and a common law perspective. Relevant case law will also be quoted.

The course will deal with all major stages of implementation of international construction projects, starting from the formation of the contract, going through its performance up to its completion or termination. Dispute resolution will also be discussed with an emphasis on adjudication and arbitration.

Upon completion of the course, you will:

- Have a thorough understanding of this specialised area of law and its interaction with commerce in a time of globalization
- Acquire a legal basis that will enable you to conduct and communicate legal analysis in relation to key topics in the field of international construction law
- Acquire enhanced problem solving skills when it comes to the settlement of construction disputes
- Have enhanced contract drafting skills

The summer school courses are part of AU Summer University and welcome Danish and international full time students, exchange students, free movers and practitioners.
